California is a state on the West Coast of the United States. I'll introduce to you three interesting places that young people must go in California along Route 66. The places are Joshua Tree National Park, Yosemite National Park, and the World's First McDonald's.

Joshua Tree National Park is located 100km east of San Bernardino, California. That place has many famous desert plants: the Joshua tree, palm trees and cactus. The western part of the park has a lot of Joshua trees. There is also an abandoned mine that was prosperous in the 19th century

Another famous place in California is Yosemite National Park. Yosemite National Park is famous for a glorious view created by glacial movement. Yosemite is one of the earliest wilderness parks in the United States. This park is best known for its waterfalls. These are the highest waterfalls in America.

The World's First McDonald's is located in San Bernardino, California. It was founded by the McDonald Brothers, however has been replaced by a museum run by the McDonald's Corporation. The McDonald's museum visit is a good experience for young people. So, I recommend the you go to World's First McDonald's.

I have introduced three places for young people in California along Route 66. I recommend that you visit all three places. Joshua Tree National Park and Yosemite National Park will impress you. And the World's First McDonald's visit is good for young people. I hope you will have a good trip!
